Lonewolf - A Poetic Memoir On Relationship

Strange that we should be silent when there is such a wonderful story to tell. I like you because you know where I'm ticklish And you don't tickle me there except just a little tiny bit sometimes But if you do, then I know where to tickle you too You know how to be silly That's why I like you Boy are you ever silly I never met anybody sillier than me till I met you I like you because you know when it's time to stop being silly Maybe day after tomorrow Maybe never Too late, it's a quarter past silly Sometimes we don't say a word We snurkle under fences We spy secret places If I am a goofus on the roofus hollering my head off You are one too If I pretend I am drowning, you pretend you are saving me If I am getting ready to pop a paper bag, then you are getting ready to jump HOORAY That's because you really like me You really like me, don't you And I really like you back And you like me back and I like you back And that's the way we keep on going every day.
