Additional reporting by Simon Falush and Ron Bousso; Writing by Melissa Akir

In it, she explored what kind of spaces and urban settings nurture a special type of social group in our era of information, namely the new media personality, promoting a boundary-less working and living environment while at the same time allowing individual decision-making processes. Her approach stems from systems thinking in the fields of infant research and psychoanalysis. We must not underestimate the difficulty in counteracting these forces. Tricia Martin-Owen teaches how to integrate our Selves and spiritual experiences with our day-to-day lives, creating a foundation to live a life of integrity and courage.
